Race Analysis: Looking to flip the first two in the market in the opener. Give Me Joy bolted in last start when first-up for the new stable and the figures out of that were very strong, but things may play out a little differently here with the engagement of Zou Royal. The only time we've seen Zou Royal at country level was a 3.1L victory at Bathurst in November and two back bumped into subsequent Midway winner Attractiveness at Newcastle. She was good late at Canterbury last start and now drops right back to a country level Class 2 and I suspect she'll try and hold her position up front from the inside draw. Lightly raced and looks beautifully placed on her latest efforts. No real knocks on Give Me Joy after that impressive last start win, she just mightn't find the front as easy as she did last time out. Must Be Sain was impressive last start but is some query out in trip being 0/5 at 1200m.

Race Analysis: Not looking to bet in this race with a lot of these evenly matched. Prophet's Promise is in good form, but those figures aren't much better than what Dunwithya and Star Turn Dancer have run to recently. Manzobeel has run some handy races too. Happy to dodge this.

9	338	KIP STAR	$4.5	3	56.5	GRATZ VELLA	SHAUN GUYMER

Race Analysis: Another race I'm not looking to bet into. Texan Star wasn't far away last time but that form is still a little below what the Murray-trained Cold Mist has produced last preparation. She's hard to trust however, being 0-11 and being beaten at Queanbeyan and Moruya last campaign. Kip Star's run here two back was impressive and getting back onto a firmer deck makes him interesting.

10	0	ROSARY SISTER	-	3	56.0	ANTHONY WARREN	ROBYN FREEMAN

Race Analysis: This looks to be shaping as a good maiden on paper. Lavender Rose started her career with the Bjorn Baker stable, trialling four times and placing in the latest heat at Rosehill back in September last year. She hasn't been sighted publicly since then, but now lobs for the Pepper barn with strike hoop JVO engaged. 11 months out of sight is the query, but she looks to have good talent on what we have seen and she commands plenty of respect. I did think La Stiava should be a little closer in the market however after some positive showings in her 2YO campaign. She jumped a $3.10 chance and then a $5 elect in the Black Opal Preview when beaten by Music Time on both occasions. Cahill is usually the strike jockey for the Gardner barn and the gate will see her stay out of trouble in the run. She's shown enough to suggest she won't be a maiden for too long. Deeply won't be far away if she can resume at a level close to her best.

8	59060	GETTY	-	6	55.0	MATTHEW KELLEY

Race Analysis: Keen to be in the corner of Action King here on the back of an impressive first-up performance at Doomben. He missed in a photo there, but the form out of it has been impressive with two winners from 4 subsequent starts since. Erin Ellison has hit the ground running as a 4kg claimer and her riding style and form suggests she won't have that claim for long - so we better jump on the bandwagon while she still does! Things look to work out nicely for Action King here and a repeat effort will see him go one better. I though Cougars should be a clear second pick on the form he brings in. He went throught the Country Championship Qualifiers before a solid effort from the front during the Wagga carnival. Back from a break here, she has early speed and Quince's 2kg claim means he carries no weight. There's enough boxes ticked to say she can fire. Sunrise Ridge comes through the same race as Zou Royal (race 1) - so we'll get a good luck at that form early. She's been campaigned like a good horse and won't be far away on her recent form.

Race Analysis: Siding with the 'fresh blood' here - although they have won similar races recently. The race Tillman won last start has its knocks with Tillman a $31 chance and with the first six across the line only 2.5L apart. That throws up Bombelleistic and Sunburnt Country as the two and could be marked shorter on that basis. Ratings say Bombelleistic should be favourite - particularly with the set up her gets here from the inside barrier. He wasn't disgraced when dropping back to the mile at Wyong last time adfter a gutsy win here prior, beating Sunburnt Country in a race that shapes similarly. Wouldn't surprise to see Bombelleistic have another gear now, although the weight swing does favour Sunburnt Country. He was solid out to 2400m last start, but he returns to the scene of his best performance here and did jump an odds-on favourite over Bombelleistic two starts ago. They look the main chances. If I was going to take anything out of the Tillman race, it would be Remadosi who didn't have luck at a crucial stage last time. If Krogh can get her out and rolling a little earlier, she can make her presence felt.
