Race Analysis: Thinking they should be a little closer at the top of betting for this one. Snap Decision lands here on the quick turnaround after dropping back to the mile and proving too strong at Goulburn on Monday. He just missed here over 2000m the start prior and it's worth noting that that was on Soft going as well. Expecting him to drift back, though he rates highly on that latest effort. Spread The Love looks a big danger however, coming back from Saturday company where she was just fair at 20-1. Connections told Stewards' they'd be more forward last time but still ended up back in the field, though her form prior to tackling Saturday and Highway grade was strong when she was settling up front. Boudvillain can work across to from gate six and she'll take catching on her recent form. RIleycat was given a very quiet ride at Queanbeyan two back behind Miss Stalwart and then never featured over further at Warwick Farm last time. Back to the mile from an inside draw, and if there's more intent with the steer, there's some value in the current price.

Race 2 | IZZY'S GIFT HANDICAP | DISTANCE: 1000m

Race Analysis: This doesn't appeal as a betting race following scratchings. Brutal Advance has good figures from better maidens, but being none from 17 is a worry. Our Lady Peace had her chance here last time out when caught late. While she'll be fitter for that run and now Collett hops on board, the debutant Tokyo Sweets looks as though she may be able to ask enough questions. Tokyo Sweets has been just okay at the trials in Sydney, but this looks a winnable race on debut.

Race Analysis: Looks a two-horse race and the market have it that way too. Mission Strike beat Liyah's Girl at Gosford, with Liyah's Girl taking off a long way from home and eventually feeling the pinch. Not much separated them there and Mission Strike has since had his chance at Scone where he bumped into a progressive type on the way up. They meet again here, and as the market suggests, there's not much between them. Don't Back Down beat home Liyah's Girl at Canberra and has been sound since. Blinkers come off now and she may be the knockout.

Race Analysis: Not really sure what to make of this event. Patrika Mist bolted in on debut before going under at her past couple. She sat off the speed last start and looked to have every chance but never fired, and that was on a Soft deck at Queanbeyan. If she can lead and run along, I may have egg on my face, though there's enough there to be hesitant. Ditterich has numbers there to feature, though he has only won 3 from 33 and where he gets to from the barrier is a query. Transactions may end up being the best suited if they look to get off the fence with the wet track. He's back in grade here first-up and won in tougher company when fresh last campaign. Quince's claim helps and he's worth keeping safe.

14		TOKORIKI	$5	3	55.5	MATTHEW SMITH	PIERRE BOUDVILLAIN

Race Analysis: This looks a good race with a few different angles. Star Stealer hit the line nicely in her latest trial when asked for an effort in the straight and the 1400m looks ideal for a filly whose family tends to get out over a bit of ground. She'll get back in the run, but she'll be finishing off strongly. Maybe her and Crunch should be a little closer together, with the Archibald's runner going under as a $1.60 pop first-up at Muswellbrook. The race was over by the time he got through the field, but he was the best closer there and the rise in trip and addition of blinkers add plenty of interest to a runner who the market has shown an interest in previously. Can make a strong case for Tokoriki who trialled over 1200m recently in an Open trial against horses who have won multiple races - including this year's Canberra Cup winner Touristic. She stuck on strongly there and she may be one the early market has overlooked, particularly with her ability to sit handy from a good draw for Boudvillain. Pariah Time was good in defeat last time out and 1400m is no issue and has to be included on his latest performance. Quiet Question looks a must for the Quaddie. He trialled sharply before his debut over 1300m where he was just fair at Hawkesbury. I'm happy to overlook his last start over 900m at Newcastle as he's just not fast enough for that, but now back out to 1400m from a good draw and down to Country level with a tongue tie being applied, there's enough there to suggest sharp improvement isn't out of the question.

Race Analysis: Peleus looks the one here third-up and bringing in a high-rating performance last start at Randwick. Easy to think there's more to come from him here third-up and he's shown he's adaptable in his racing pattern. Already rates on top with Racing & Sports and coming back to 1200m today third-up looks a recipe for him to raise the bar once again. Hurry Miss won from nowhere here three starts back and showed it wasn't a fluke by digging in and gritting out a tough win at Moruya after that. Went to Randwick last start and held her own over 1300m and this looks to shape nicely for her from a middle alley, with the sting out of the track suiting. My Last Hooray contested The Kosciuszko two back before a sound run in the Road To The Chest here on Melbourne Cup Day. He has to be kept safe.

Race Analysis: Siding with the topweight in the Community Chest. It's a very good race with plenty of angles, but Sandpaper makes the most appeal for me through the Ladie's Day Cup at Hawkesbury where he set the tempo and was only gunned down late in the race. He's an on-speed runner which is a big bonus here and he'll handle the sting out of the ground. This is an easier race today and he'll take plenty of catching as he reaches peak fitness fourth-up. I'mintowin looks the main danger. He's been racing well without winning this campaign as he returned off a 620-day break. Back to 1400m may be the query, but he's had his chance to knock over the four races he's contested this time in and he hasn't had the killer blow as yet. Jumped favourite in the Little Dance last start where he failed, but this suits him a little better. Brave Xena looks the most likely of the local brigade, and the fact she's untapped at 1400m and continues to rise through the grades makes her an exciting prospect. She ran through a solid tempo to win a 1200m Highway last start and if she goes close here, she'd have to be one of the favourites for the Country Championships next year. Personally, I think it's either Alabama State or nothing out of the Snake Gully Cup. He was too good there and now meets them all better at the weights, plus he's raced well on the quick turnaround previously. Asgarda has a poor third-up record and the map looks sticky, so she's one in the market I'm happy to avoid.

Race Analysis: Mayfair is the best horse in the race, but he's 309 days between races and has switched to the Beer & Carpenter barn. His latest trial was a little iffy, but it's important to know that he didn't wear blinkers there and gets them back on for his return today. His form fell away at the end of last campaign, but that's still a good enough level to win this set weights Class 2. He was beaten 3.7L in the Community Chest on this day last year, and now lobs in a much easier assignment. He looks a good blast out in the last. Rockthevelio looks an exciting horse in the making, winning over 1200m fresh before scoring at provincial level before the break. 1300m first-up looks a very good move and the trials coming in were good without setting the world alight. She's a progressive type and she can fire a shot first-up, especially if the favourite's a little ring rusty. It's worth including horses like Barbarossa in the Quaddie who was strong here two back in a similar event. He dipped a little last start, but a return to the form he showed two back - and the good draw - make him attractive. Ahellbenda is likely to get back from the draw, though she flashed late and the splits were very good. Remaining at 1300m may be the query, but she's worth having in exotics.
