Race Analysis: Witch Of November is a hard one to line up. Her maiden win came when sitting on the speed over 1000m, but since then she's raced on wet decks and racing off the speed. After failing over 1350m at Griffith last time, she's with the Olive stable now and faces an easier assignment back to a BM50. While she hasn't done much winning, her ratings are consistent enough to knock over a field like this - especially if she sits handy. Soho Sushi has bumped into a couple this campaign, narrowly missing two back before being no match for the winner here last time. Racing well and should be thereabouts again.

Race Analysis: Thinking Pariah Time is the correct favourite, though I'm not sure I can get him as short as the early markets have him. He jumped a $2.90 chance here last start when fresh over 1200m and had every chance in the run in a maiden that ended up rating below average with Racing And Sports. Out to 1300m now may hold the cards, but his fresh rating was similar to what he's done in the past with no underlying signs that he's about to explode. Top Pick may be the opposite, however. She showed some spark despite being 20-1 at her last start and her trial around some handy types coming in suggests she's ready to go out to 1300m for the first time. I want to keep her on side. Hellfire Henry has had every chance his past couple and has failed to fire. Others may have gone past him now.

Race Analysis: Divine Secrets brings in the best last start rating despite going under at Goulburn. She's been freshened and has trialled strongly in town recently. Back to a trip where she's won before, she maps to get a lovely run and if she gets back to anything like her best figures, she'll run away with this. Regor is improving with racing and is not to be discounted on his last two victories. He's trending the right way, but at this point in time, Divine Secrets should be clear favourite. Fortythreebeans seems a big price for a horse who ended last campaign on a winning note as a $1.22 favourite. She mightn't have beaten much there, but the way she did it and the figure she put up suggests it won't be her only victory. Thinking she's too big at her early price.

Race Analysis: Bengal drops back to Federal level today after two strong showings in Highway company and a soid performance behind Youre Not The King at Hawkesbury, which ties him in through Sir Franklin. Bengal carried more weight than Youre Not The King and finished closer than Sir Franklin did at his last start, when carrying less weight. The barrier draw may be a niggle for Bengal, but he's the beneficiary of a couple of highly rated horse being engaged as he drops a stack of weight on his latest performances. Looks beautifully placed and poised to strike off a winning trial recently. Sir Franklin is the next pick off a strong showing in town this time in, behind Youre Not The King most recently where he held his own. Should get the gun run from an inside barrier and any sting out of the ground is a big tick for him. My Last Hooray hit the line nicely in Ther Kosciuszko after being well back and never featuring. 1300m at this level looks a good move and he can be flashing late.

10	5686x	THE FORCE AWAKENS	-	2	55.5	CON KARAKATSANIS	AMY MCLUCAS

Race Analysis: This is shaping as a strong maiden on paper, and it's hard to find a way in betting wise. Our Lady Peace has had a few opportunities, though all at a stronger level than what she lines up in here. She's been at the pointy end of the market in those runs and looks the right favourite on her profile, though Mayweather has trialled really nicely for the Snowden team and looks to have good upside. Disappointed before the break at Goulburn though and looking at his SP's vs. Our Lady Peace, the market shows that they think OLP is a better commodity. Isle Of Wright trialled the house down here and was smashed in betting at Orange. He jumped a $1.60 chance after $2 was bet early and he never looked likely, with no explanation offered and no abnormalities found by the vets. He's a bit of a head scratcher, but his trial form shows he's up to this. Ahoy Hoy also looks to have good ability, winning both trials, including a heat over Lady Mariana who jumped an odds-on chance on debut. He looks a trendy pick, but he's hard to pin down on the other's exposed form. The one who does appear out of place is Soviet Storm after a going under as a $7 chance at Bathurst last start.

13	48350	SUPIDO SECRET	-	6	55.0	PAUL NICEFORO	JORDAN QUINCE (A2.0)

Race Analysis: Hellfighter is the correct favourite off what he's produced recently, though while the ratings are consistently at a good level, he's now 15 starts into his career without winning. Back up to the mile this time should suit and that form ties him in through Morosini, where Hellfighter jumped an odds-on favourite and beat Morosini home at Moruya just two starts ago. The danger looks to be the lightly raced 3YO in Iron Rebel, who improved his ratings quickly when out to the mile for the first time. Out of the Canberra-trained mare Maid Of Ore, he'll only be better over further and third-up now with some favours, he can challenge for the win. The Hard Road won well at Queanbeyan to break his maiden and looks progressive enough. The mile doesn't seem a niggle on the way he finished off last time.

~~10~~	~~89767~~	~~EVER WAS~~	~~–~~	~~7~~	~~55.0~~	~~JOHN STEINMETZ~~	~~SHAUN GUYMER~~

Race Analysis: Tricky race to end the day. Pure Melody launched late to knock them over last start when getting out to 2000m. That was just her second try at the distance, and she hasn't gone backwards in either attempt and she may take closer order from a good draw this time. Turned in a strong rating last start, but that doesn't seem her ceiling, and it wouldn't surprise to see her raise the bar again. Snap Decision is another who looks open to plenty of improvement, being by Proisir and out of a High Chaparral mare and stepping out to 2000m for the second time. He has a good fitness base over a mile and he jumped a $2.70 second favourite in his first try at this distance range. He's been closing strongly off good time figures and it wouldn't surprise to see him explode now. Zippy Lion is another who can improve out to this trip now after closing strongly at Nowra last time out and actually beat home Snap Decision in that race. That form looks good for this, and he has to be included. Midnight Affair has been close in stronger company, including at this track and trip two back and commands respect.
